It also has built-in documentation support and the ability to create technical specifications using a graphical workflow and a filter interface. Another advantage of the SPx over the CRS250 is that it's more powerful, so it can create faster and more precise models than its predecessor. The SPx works on PC or Mac (OS 10.8+) and can be configured with a single 16:9 screen or a dual 17:9 aspect ratio screen. The driver is very straightforward, and setting up the unit is also easy. One of my early memories is waking up one Saturday morning to a beautifully lit, snow-covered view of our home and its extensive garden and yard. It was a gift. As I was growing up, the father that preceded me did what fathers do in a time before the beleaguered nuclear family was the standard: took out the lawnmower and spent an hour mowing. He kept up a routine of mowing before dawn and again before sunset, so that the yard looked its best throughout the day. I remember the long hours spent quietly sitting at the kitchen table, all decked out in my Sunday best, the sun streaming in from the bay windows and warming my face, the sweet smell of a freshly mowed lawn clinging to my clothes, the quiet with which the yard was filled. Before school and work and the chaos of modern life, our home was filled with leisure, with quiet, with this gorgeous view. And I know that there are others who do the same for their families. My husband and I are, like all parents, in search of more time and space for family life, more time for father and mother, and more time for togetherness. But the nature of work means that it is becoming increasingly challenging to find that time, and it is clear that our culture has begun to devalue the concept. Take, for example, the $36bn paid out in employee bonuses last year, on top of the billions being poured into infrastructure projects. Or the $60bn being invested in new automated warehouse technology. Or the $100bn poured into artificial intelligence research and development. Or the $5bn being spent in the United States on self-driving vehicles alone. The industries supporting these investments have been well- 82157476af
